MARRIAGES AND DEATHS IN DUTCHESS COUNTY
1778 — 1825
EDITORIAL PREFACE

The notices of marriages and deaths listed in this volume have been copied from newspapers which (with a few exceptions) were published at Poughkeepsie, New York. The original papers are filed in several libraries and the items presented here are arranged in groups, each group credited to the library in which the papers quoted may be referred to.

To all owners of newspapers who have kindly co-operated in the preparation of this book the Dutchess County Historical Society offers sincere thanks and records here the appreciation of the society of the privileges and courtesies extended to it.

In the lists printed in following pages editorial license has been used to condense the wording of the notices. All statements of fact have been retained but expressions of emotion, unnecessary details and stereotyped phrases have been omitted in order to save time, labor and expense. Any definite information, stated or implied, in obituaries has in many instances been reduced to as few words as possible and placed in a parenthesis immediately after the notice of death.

Preceding each item will be found the initial letters of the name of the newspaper in which the item was printed, with the date of the issue of the paper. Following this preface a table of the full titles of the newspapers is provided.

The earliest date that is stated contemporaneously with a notice is that of the marriage of Andrew Billings and Cornelia Livingston, widow of Lawrence Van Kleeck. The notice occurs in The New York Journal and General Advertiser of August 10, 1778, which is on file in the Public Library of the City of New York. The lists are carried down to and including notices in papers of December, 1825, and thus cover a period of forty-seven years.

The notices quoted in following pages were all culled from newspapers of Poughkeepsie, New York, with the exception of those taken from three New York City papers. Samuel Louden and John Holt of New York, printers, operated their presses in Dutchess County while the British held New York City, the former at Fishkill and the latter at Poughkeepsie. Louden published The New York Packet and American Advertiser and Holt The New York Journal and General Advertiser. A few local items were gleaned from their papers. The third New York paper quoted is The Weekly Museum, a statement in regard to which is prefixed to the list itself.

The editor has adhered to the spelling of names which appears in the notices except where there are self-evident typographical errors.

The abbreviations: ult. and inst., for ultimo and instant, occur in the original and were the usage then current. They refer, respectively, to the month immediately preceding that in which the quoted issue of the newspaper is dated and to the month of the quoted issue itself.

Marriage ceremonies were performed both by ordained ministers and by justices of the peace. As a rule the justices were men whose names are still well known in connection with their local communities. It has not been possible to compile a record of all the officiating ministers but a partial list is given on another page which may be helpful when it is desired to learn in what part of the county a marriage took place.

In good usage today there is a shade of difference between the words: respectable and respected. A respectable man may be somewhat obscure in the community. A respected man is apt to be outstanding and possessed of qualities of a positively desirable sort. The editor would call attention to the fact that in these newspaper notices of 1778-1825 the word: respectable is used in the sense in which respected is now employed.

The notices quoted on following pages are arranged by surnames, alphabetically. Notices of deaths refer to men and women, both. Notices of marriages appear in the main lists arranged by names of men and a subordinate list or index of women's names is appended. In the main lists, where a surname occurs more than once, entries are made chronologically, by which method the sequence of events in a family is quickly and clearly disclosed.

While these newspaper notices were in course of preparation for the press Mrs. James T. Watts of Washington, D. C., kindly offered for inclusion with them a copy of the contents of the Book of Memoirs kept by her great-grandfather, George Casey, as a justice of the peace in Dutchess County. In his book Justice Casey entered a record of the marriage ceremonies he performed while in office 1802-1809. Inasmuch as the subject-matter of the Book of Memoirs is the same as that of the newspaper notices, Mrs. Watts's offer was accepted with appreciation and a verbatim copy of the contents of the Book of Memoirs is appended herein to the lists of newspaper articles.

The libraries of the American Antiquarian Society, Worcester, Massachusetts, and the Buffalo Historical Society, Buffalo, New York, and the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., contain collections of newspapers in which are included many issues of papers printed at Poughkeepsie, New York, before 1825. These collections duplicate in part the papers cited in this volume. But they also provide additional material, to which the reader is referred for further information inasmuch as it was found impractical to include the same in the lists here recorded.

In the tedious and exacting task of reading the proof for this book the editor received invaluable assistance from Miss Mary Johnston Elsworth, a trustee of the historical society, for which generous gift of time and labor grateful acknowledgment is made.

The Dutchess County Historical Society publishes these records in the hope and the belief that students of local and family history will find the material both useful and interesting.

Helen Wilkinson Reynolds.

LIST TEN

Notices contained in newspapers owned by the Adriance Memorial Library, Poughkeepsie, New York. The collection of local newspapers now on deposit in the Adriance Memorial Library was begun many years ago and steadily, if slowly, increased in size. Recently it was appreciably enlarged by a gift from Mrs. Ephraim Tomlinson Gill of Haddonfield, New Jersey. The value and importance of the collection created by the combination of Mrs. Gill's gift with the papers previously in the library supplied the inspiration for the preparation of this book.

Miscellany

P. J., Tues., Sep. 7, 1802. "Stanford, Dutchess County, Aug. 18, Mrs. Elizabeth Meigs, the wife of Mr. Phineas Meigs, was on this day delivered of four living daughters at one birth—they all weighed 9 lb. 11 oz."

P. B., Tues. June 28, 1803. "On Saturday last the wife of Mr. Casparus Van Keuren was delivered of Three Fine Children, two boys and a girl. Mr. Van Keuren, we understand, is an honest citizen who has a family of nine children which depend solely upon his industry and exertions for support."

R. H., Wed., April 8, 1812. "The following persons have recently died in the town of Stanford: Daniel Lawrence, Catherine Betts, Nicholas Wilson, Silas Haight, Caleb Barton, Widow Hull, Andrew Wilson, Catherine Whitehead. In Clinton: Polly Bates, James Smith. In Amenia: Jabez Barlow. A correspondent informs us that since December, twenty-nine persons have died in Stanford and three-fourths of that number during the month of March."

"I find in your Journal of this day an account of the death of Mrs. Brisban, an inmate of the poor house in this town, and that her age was 100 years. Sixty years ago I knew Mary and her husband, James Brisban, perfectly well. He has been deceased several years; he was the youngest son of a Protestant clergyman in the north of Ireland and married Mary soon after his arrival in this country. They were a happy pair—too happy ever to be able to decypher the word Discordance. Always poor but ever honest. Charitably disposed, their hands were ever open and they never bestowed a mite without wishing it a pound. I think Mary Brisban was at least 108 years old. Fare thee well kind hearted Mary! Green grow the tufts which cover thy humble grave and sweet the lowly violet which blooms over thy venerable form."

He ever maintained a character of punctuality and integrity, filled for the most of his life important offices with the greatest exactness, ability and public confidence. He ever was a republican in principle and demonstrated till the last that he was no friend to aristocracy or monarchy. He died rejoicing that the Lord reigns and some of his last words (about an hour before his death) were: "Let all creatures and things rejoice in and praise the Lord."

The mild manners and sweet disposition of this gentleman endeared him to all and render his loss the subject of universal regret. Early in life he became the soldier of his country and was not seventeen when he was embodied with the force which filled this village when the British fleet and army spread desolation along the shores of his native river. The two following campaigns he was an officer in the service of the state on the northwest frontier and in 1780 received a commission attaching him to the corps of artillery in the army of the United States. With that army he assisted at the seige of York town; and only sheathed his sword when every sword on the continent was returned to the scabbard."

Impelled by early enterprise and industry he, nearly 60 years ago, left the easy plains of Long Island to encounter the labours and hardships of a new country. His farm, on which he died, was the first place in which he commenced his laborious career; amidst the gloom of a wilderness and the howlings of the beasts of the forest his ardour never shrunk from the pursuit he was engaged in. His industry produced him competency; his integrity, confidence; and his candour and urbanity—friendship and esteem. His whole life, except a few of the last months, has been a continued scene of useful activity, distinguished by undeviating honesty, sobriety and hospitality. Such are the characters that should be held up for an example to those that follow them. Such the virtues that most eminently deserve imitation. 'An honest man's the noblest work of God.'"
